This study examines the transformations that trigger business models with paid content strategies on news organizations under the theoretical framework of market orientation. Alarmed at the rapid progress of the disease and high mortality rates, AIDS activists developed scientific knowledge including an understanding of scientific practices to demand modifications to drug-testing procedures and to the Food and Drug Administration's drug approval policies; working together, they successfully advocated for alternatives to the placebo-control protocol for clinical trials previously a cornerstone of biomedical procedures in order to expedite the delivery of drugs to consumers in what can be characterized as health emergencies.

Drawing on the data gathered during a 3-year ethnographic study, we illustrate Today's children are bombarded by a range of media, and it is the responsibility of teachers to equip students to engage critically. This study investigated the first author's process of implementing new literacy practices as a teacher in a Finnish first-grade classroom from a poststructuralist perspective by using nexus analysis NA. Compared to traditional materials or journals, user-generated contents are not peer-reviewed.
